

Dugger Band Bio 2021

Dugger Band, fronted by brothers Jordan and Seth Dugger, is a high-energy country duo raised in East Tennessee. The Duggers grew up in a musical family and still recall the smell of diesel from their Dad's bus as young kids. Their first performances were on the kitchen floor when they would drag out Mom and Dad's pots and pans and create their own drum set. They then progressed from singing on the coffee table to singing in church. As they moved toward their teenage years Jordan and Seth began performing outside of church at local fairs, festivals and other events. They both attended the University of Tennessee with Jordan majoring in Architecture and Seth in Finance with a Concentration in Entrepreneurship. While attending school and excelling in the classroom, the brothers were regularly playing four shows a week out of town. After graduation, the brothers jumped into music full time.

Jordan and Seth both sing lead, play multiple instruments, write their own songs and produce their own records. Their live shows keep the audience hooked through every moment of the performance as the brothers will make you laugh until you cry and give you a night you will not forget. They are in high demand, performing more than 200 live shows a year with a strong national following. They perform at fairs, festivals, promote their own ticketed events, have a residency at MGM in Las Vegas and keep fans coming back for more.

Over the past seven years Dugger Band has released three albums; Fly (2014), East Tennessee Son (2018), and Greek To Me (2020). Their sound is energetic and high-velocity that is overlaid by family harmony and back porch down-home vibes. The brothers have enjoyed success on Country radio nationally, released several official music videos and continue writing and recording new music. Their brand-new album is set to release this year and Jordan and Seth are looking forward to hitting the stage in 2021.
